New British Chief Rabbi Was Israeli Envoy To Ottawa

Dr. Jacob Herzog, Rabbi, a senior official in the Israel Foreign Office, is to succeed Dr. Israel Brodie as Chief Rabbi of the British Commonwealth on his retirement this month. The decision to name Dr. Herzog was taken at a ninety-minute meeting in London by a special committee set up by the Chief Rabbinate Conference, says the London Times, under the chairmanship of Sir Isaac Wolfson. A statement issued after the meeting said:—

"The committee unanimously decided to recommend to the conference that the name of Dr. Jacob Herzog be placed before the conference for appointment as Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Commonwealth of Nations. A representative delegation is leaving almost immediately for Israel to wait upon the Rabbi." The Chief Rabbinate Conference accepted the proposal.

Dr. Herzog, who is forty-four years of age, was born in Dublin and went to Israel with his father, Dr. Isaac Herzog, who was Chief Rabbi there. He was personal assistant to his father for some years, and later became head of the Christian Department of the Ministry of Religions in Israel.

He joined the foreign service in the early fifties, and after serving as Minister in the Israel Embassy in Washington, he was between 1960 and 1963 Ambassador in Ottawa. His present position as assistant director general in the Foreign Ministry is the equivalent of a deputy Permanent Under-Secretary in Britain.

Dr. Brodie, who is seventy, has been Chief Rabbi since 1948.

Confessed Israeli Spy Is Hanged By Syria

Eliahu Ben Saul Cohn, a 41-year-old Israeli citizen, was hanged in the main public square of Damascus at dawn after conviction of having spied for Israel. The announcement of the execution was made by Lieut. Col. Salah Dalli, president of a Syrian special military court, says the New York Times, and was broadcast by the Damascus radio.

Before the execution Cohn, a 41-year-old Israeli citizen, was taken to a nearby police station, where he repeated a prayer after a Syrian rabbi and wrote a letter to his wife, Nadia, and their three children in Israel. He asked his wife to remarry and not leave his children fatherless.

Cohn's body, wrapped in a long white sheet of paper on which was written the military court's verdict, remained hanging for six hours.

The verdict said that Cohn had been sentenced to death in the name of the Arab people in the Syrian Republic after he had been found guilty of having entered the country in disguise and of having obtained secret Syrian information and transmitted it to the enemy. Colonel Dalli and other members of the military court attended the execution.

Cohn was arrested early this year and his trial began in February. He had come to Syria in 1962 disguised as a Syrian emigrant from Argentina. At his trial he confessed that he had been trained to assume a new identity by Israeli intelligence.

Cohn was sentenced May 8 with six Syrians, who received prison sentences ranging between three months and 10 years. The six were found guilty of having supplied Cohn with information that he subsequently sent to Israel, reports the New York Times. They included Lieut. Maazah Zahreddin, nephew of retired Lieut. Col. Abdel Karim Zahreddin, a former Syrian Commander in Chief.

ESHKOL TURNS DOWN BOURGUIBA PLAN, AWAITS PEACE, BUILDS DEFENSES, RESISTS BEN-GURION

Premier Levi Eshkol forcefully appealed for peace between the Arab states and Israel. In his address to the Knesset (Parliament), he seemed bent on encouraging whatever trends to moderation might have grown out of the recent peace proposals by President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia.

At the same time, Premier Eshkol made it clear that Israel could not accept the conditions posed by President Bourguiba for territorial concessions and the repatriation of Arab refugees by Israel.

"The peace settlement will be established on the basis of Israel as it is," the Premier said firmly.

Although the majority of the Arab states have publicly denounced President Bourguiba for advocating recognition of Israel, Premier Eshkol said he believed that the proposals for peace and coexistence were not isolated exceptions.

"Without giving way to premature optimism," he said, "we are entitled to assume that among the Arab public and even among its political leadership there are still thinking men and prominent personalities who accept in their hearts the inevitability of coexistence."

Harking back to the armistice agreements of 1949, the Premier said:

"The beginning of wisdom is the courage to liberate oneself from the self-hypnosis of hate propaganda, to sit down at the conference table without prior conditions, and in full mutual respect to begin to spin the thread from the point where it was left."

Premier Eshkol proposed that "direct negotiations" toward "agreements for peace" be conducted between Israel and the countries that signed the 1949 transitional armistice accords. The Arab signatories to the agreements were Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Egypt.

From such a beginning, Premier Eshkol argued, could come enormous benefits in the economic, cultural, and social sectors for the region and to its people.

He gave two reasons for turning down the Bourguiba conditions. On the question of territorial concessions, he observed that the territory held by Israel represented only 1.5 per cent of the total area possessed by the four neighboring Arab states.

"In this situation," he declared, "there is neither sense nor justice in territorial changes to Israel's disadvantage and there is neither the power nor the possibility — juridical or practical — to carry them out."

On the repatriation of the Arab refugees, he asserted that "the only solution compatible with their true and basic interests as well as ours" was to settle the refugees among "their brethren in nationality, tongue, customs, outlook and faith" in the Arab states "with their extensive territories and wealth of water resources."

The Premier said that Israel was prepared in conjunction with the major powers to help to finance an Arab resettlement and rehabilitation program even though Israel had "perhaps already fulfilled her obligations" legally by settling 600,000 Jewish refugees from Arab states in Israel.

But while waiting for peace, Premier Eshkol went on, Israel must continue to strengthen her defenses in the face of an Arab build-up.

He spoke strongly against President Gamal Abdel Nasser, charging the United Arab Republic with subversive activities against other Arab states.

"A day will come when the Arab countries which are a target for his stratagems will realize that the true division is not between Israel and the Arabs but between lovers of peace and aggressors and when they realize this fact they will draw the logical conclusions," Premier Eshkol said.

Meanwhile, former Premier David Ben-Gurion declared that he was ready to return to the leadership of the Mapai party "if both the nation and the Mapai support me."

Mr. Ben-Gurion, who is seventy-eight years old, said he was "available for the premiership," which he turned over two years ago to Levi Eshkol, with whom he has been feuding.

Mr. Ben-Gurion said Mr. Eshkol was not fit to be Premier. He said in a published interview that "Eshkol does not represent me." He added, "I'm not aware that the nation does not want me."

He referred to Mr. Eshkol's demand that Cabinet members who agreed with Mr. Ben-Gurion resign. A statement issued by a Ben-

West Germans Recoil From Nazi Trials, Believe They Are Made To Pay For Past Sins Of Others

Shortly after the West German Parliament approved extension of the statutory deadline for the prosecution of Nazi criminals, a television commentator sarcastically suggested the unpopularity of the move.

"I should like to express the thanks of the German people to the members of Parliament for the high level of the debate, and to the people of Tel Aviv and New York who made it possible," he said, writes Arthur J. Olsen, in the New York Times. The commentator pointed up the feeling that the extension bill was enacted under heavy pressure from abroad.

In one opinion poll 73 per cent of the women and 65 per cent of the men who were approached replied "yes" to the question: "Do you think prosecutions of Nazi criminals should be brought to an end?"

The small Free Democratic party, whose strategists have decided to seek electoral fortune this year in an appeal to the "nationalist" vote, took this and similar opinion studies at face value.

This was the basis of the Free Democrats' decision to oppose dramatically any extension of the hunt for Nazi criminals.

It is by no means certain that the small party's position will assist its struggle for survival. It is clear that the West German Government took one of the major moral decisions of its brief history without enthusiasm.

Did this action mark a lingering sympathy for the grey-haired men and women who are marching to the dock in courtrooms all over the republic? Do West Germans today privately repudiate their formal repudiation of Germany's Nazi heritage?

Barring the insignificant right radical fringe — one or two adult citizens out of 100 — this is patently not so. Rarely is a voice raised in defense of the accused — even of the group of elderly nurses who explained to a Munich court that they had given lethal injections to mental patients because Herr Doktor had assured them that it was not only legal but merciful to do so.

West Germans recoil from the repetitive trials today because they feel that the new Germany is being made to pay for the sins of the old. For the ordinary citizen, who does not identify with the ex-Nazi defendants, says the New York Times, these trials mean first of all a raking over of the vanished past to the injury of the painstakingly built reputation of post Nazi Germany.

West German Army conscripts, not yet born in the Hitler era, were met on a NATO exercise in Denmark in March with protest demonstrations and cries of "Nazi!" Reading about it back home, their fathers think it would not have happened if the trials had not freshened old memories.

The trials also tend to exacerbate a problem of generations ("What did you do during the war, father?"). And they offer the country's extreme right an opportunity to hitch its kite to a potentially broad-based resentment.

Many a citizen, holding no brief whatever for the man in the dock, honestly believes it is healthier for the new Germany to "close the books." Most of all, he believes it is time for the world to let the German people off probation.

"When you consider Germany's history as a whole, we as a nation have nothing to be ashamed of," said Chancellor Erhard in a recent speech in Berlin. "The German people have again become somebody," he told a Christian Democratic party rally.

But Dr. Eugen Gerstenmaier, the President of the Bundestag, said the next day that this was not yet quite so, says the New York Times. "German policy in the West must take into account a continuing reserve and inner aloofness, even if it be politely veiled," he said.

Not a few West Germans, as judged from letters to the editor and after-hours discussions in bars, react to their continuing "probationary" status with a sense of injustice.

Germans were the victims as well as the perpetrators in the savagery surrounding World War II, they say. Who is wringing his hands over the unpunished murderers in Eastern Europe, for example? they ask.

Despite the side effects of the trials of Nazis and the wish that it all could be consigned to history, West Germany has decided to go forward with the Nazi hunt and the prosecutions for at least almost five years more.

This was the achievement of a group of West Germans that is very probably a numerical minority — older persons of conscience and a younger generation that insists on "mastering the past", says the New York Times. A little-noticed fact of perhaps equal significance is that only a much smaller minority found a voice to raise in protest.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

★ COMBINED JEWISH APPEAL ★

Total allocations of $2,476,021 towards the 1965 budgetary requirements of its participant beneficiaries have been approved by the board of directors of Combined Jewish Appeal, of which Moe Levitt is president. Michael Greenblatt, Q.C., is chairman of the budget committee. These allocations come from proceeds of the 1964 Joint Campaign for Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal which raised a total of $4,126,701. Mr. Levitt and Mr. Greenblatt praised George H. Scott, 1964 general chairman, for campaign achievements in raising $126,626 more than in 1963. Forty percent of the 1964 campaign total, amounting to $1,650,680, will go to the United Israel Appeal under the agreement between Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal. This is an increase of $60,517 compared to last year. The United Israel Appeal supports the program of the Jewish Agency for Israel as to reception and rehabilitation of Jewish newcomers. The amount of $2,476,021, for Combined Jewish Appeal beneficiaries for the current year, is an increase of $81,021 compared to 1964, to help to alleviate rising cost factors which are beyond the control of the agencies. The United Jewish Relief Agencies allocation was of $720,000, an increase of $40,000 over last year, supporting overseas programs of the Joint Distribution Committee in Europe and Israel; ORT vocational training schools; Alliance Israelite homes and schools in the Middle East; United Hias Service; Ozar Hatorah Schools; the Ezras Torah Fund in Israel; World Jewish Congress; financial grants for settlement of Jewish immigrants in Canada. The influx of new immigrants from North Africa, mainly from Morocco, has necessitated an increase of UJRA spending in Canada for maintenance, rehabilitation, and settlement of these refugees. Indications are that this upward trend, particularly in North African immigration, will continue in 1965. The Jewish General Hospital grant is $430,000, the same amount as in 1964. The Jewish General Hospital has had an improved current situation since the inception of the Quebec Hospital Insurance Service. However, hospital insurance has not been paying for out-patient care (prior to the recent announcement in the Quebec budget) nor has it been paying for research and teaching programs. The hospital must also cover financing charges of its large accumulated deficit of past years and is confronted in addition with increased salary scales. Canadian Jewish Congress grant of $164,650 is an increase of $6,650 over last year. For the Federation of Jewish Community Services and its ten constituent agencies, the Combined Jewish Appeal has provided $827,000, the same as in 1964. Maimonides Hospital recently moved to its new building and faces a great increase in operating costs. The Jewish Convalescent Hospital is in the midst of its construction program which will be completed this year. Other Jewish Federation agencies are: Baron de Hirsch Institute and Jewish Child Welfare Bureau; Jewish Vocational Service; Neighbourhood House; Herzl Health Service Centre; Camp Wooden Acres; and the Golden Age Program of National Council of Jewish Women. The Jewish Immigrant Aid Services grant is $72,000 for the current year, an increase of $7,000. JIAS is the national agency which assists Jewish newcomers to settle in Canada. It is currently dealing with a large number of French speaking immigrants from Morocco. It will also relocate its Montreal headquarters from Esplanade Avenue to the Cote des Neiges area. Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation for Jewish students at universities in the Montreal area, receives $45,500, an increase of $2,000 over last year. The Jewish Public Library allocation is $47,500, the same as in 1964. For Camp Bnai Brith, the allocation is $110,000, the same as in 1964. For the Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp, a provisional allocation is $26,000, the same as last year. The amount of $22,571 for contingencies to meet certain priority needs such as (1) the possible needs of Federation hospitals for larger grants and (2) the possible requirement of an increased grant for the education department of Canadian Jewish Congress was approved. Others on the budget committee are: Moe Levitt, Monroe Abbey, Q.C.; Edward Barkoff, Ben Block, Peter Bronfman, Gordon Brown, Hyman Feldman, Alan Finestone, Michael Garber, Q.C.; Sol Gottfried, J. A. Lyone Heppner, David S. Katz, Jack Kaufman, Boris G. Levine, Jacob M. Lowy, Louis Magil, Cecil Pascal, Jack Reitman, Edward I. Roll, Cecil Usher. Alvin Bronstein is executive director; Henry Oelberg, comptroller.

GIRLS, YESHIVA UNIVERSITY CHEF IS BACK WITH SHAVUOUS RECIPES

Shavuous is a joyous Spring Festival on the Jewish calendar, a time of the year when many synagogues are decorated with flowers and plants as a reminder of the ancient agricultural celebrations of the Jewish people. To be observed this year on June 6 and June 7, Shavuous commemorates the giving of the Ten Commandments to the Tribes of Israel seven weeks after the first day of Passover.

The food product traditionally associated with Shavuous is cheese, and Jewish families look forward to the cheese mixtures and delicacies and other dairy products served during the two-day holiday.

Alfred Parker, executive chef at Yeshiva University in New York City and one of the foremost authorities on Jewish cooking, says that Shavuous offers unlimited possibilities for the enterprising housewife and homemaker. "There are many wonderful, tasteful dishes you can serve on Shavuous, such as cheese cake and cheese pancakes, two of my personal favorites," he observes.

Here is Mr. Parker's recipe for cheese cake:

Ingredients for Crust

one cup of corn flakes or graham crackers
one fourth lb. butter three tablespoons of sugar one teaspoonful of cinnamon one cup of pineapple pie filling or cherry pie filling

Ingredients for Cheese Mix

one teaspoonful of vanilla one pound of cream cheese
one cup of sugar six eggs
one cup of sour cream
one tablespoon of flour
grated skin of one lemon
pinch of salt

Start to make the crust by crushing the corn flakes or the crackers into small pieces. Then mix with butter, sugar, and cinnamon. Spread out on bottom of springform pan. Add fruit filling on top. Mix egg yolks with sugar, cream cheese, sour cream, and salt. Then add lemon, flour, and vanilla. Beat egg whites to a snow and fold into the mixture. Place the mixture on top of the fruit filling and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Let it cool by opening door of stove. Twelve portions.

And now Mr. Parker's recipe:

Cheese Pancakes

one pound farmer cheese
two eggs
two cups of matzoh meal
one-half cup of sugar
two ounces of diluted butter
one-half teaspoonful salt
grated skin of one lemon
one teaspoonful vanilla
one cup corn flake crumbs

Grind cheese and mix with egg yolks. Add butter. Then add sugar, grated lemon, vanilla, and matzoh meal. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the mixture. Form into pancakes and roll in corn flakes. Fry in hot vegetable shortening. Serve with sour cream or food sauce. Twelve servings.

Mr. Parker puts in a 14-hour day supervising three Yeshiva University cafeterias. He estimates that he drives close to 400 miles per week to oversee the preparation of 10,000 kosher meals at the three cafeterias: Yeshiva College, Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, Manhattan; Stern College for Women, 253 Lexington Avenue, Manhattan; and the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Eastchester Road and Morris Park Avenue, the Bronx.

He became a cook by accident. At the age of 18, he was an engineering student in his native Vienna, but was forced to flee when Austria was invaded in 1938. He went to a refugee camp in Switzerland where he quitted after the court had ruled that their relationship with Cohn had been strictly social.

Beirut newspapers opposed to the Baath party regime in Syria contended that Cohn had worked his way to the top men in the Syrian Government and had supplied Israel with military information so vital that Israelis in a border clash last November fired on Syrian military outposts with unprecedented accuracy.

Reports in Beirut during Cohn's trial in Damascus said that he had insinuated himself well into the ruling structure of Syria's Baath party. Among his associates, it was stated, were President Amin el-Hafez, Cabinet Ministers and two members of the military court that later convicted him.

Late last year Cohn was permitted to go on an inspection tour of the Israel border with Lieut. Gen. Ali Ali Amer, chief of the Arab Unified Military Command, according to the reports.

They said that Cohn had entered Syria describing himself as a multimillionaire who had helped the country by financing a branch of the Baath party in Buenos Aires and by donating "millions" for arms for the Syrian Army, says the New York Times. The Syrian Government later denied these details about Cohn's activities, charging that they had been fabricated by United States agents as revenge for the exposure of American spies in Syria.

IN THIS ERA OF PEACE UNDER PERIL: "O, COME LET US WALK IN THE LIGHT OF THE LORD"

By Emanuel G. Scoblionko, president of the World Council of Synagogues; excerpt from inaugural dinner address at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York

The Jews of America have done much to create a spirit of rapprochement with Catholics and Protestants. There exists today a far finer understanding and cordiality than existed only a decade ago. Let us as Jews now step forward and seek similar understanding and cordiality with other great religions.

Judaism is an ancient faith, the oldest living faith. Judaism is the mother religion of Christianity and Islam. We have made progress in our relations with one; let us now press forward toward better relations with the other.

Mohammedanism today has scores of millions of adherents in many nations of the world. Moslems worship one God. Moslems recognize the sanctity of our Bible. Moslems revere and venerate the founders and prophets of Judaism. Moslems acknowledge holy shrines sacred to Jews, such as the Cave of Machpelah. The Moslem calendar includes Nebi Musa, a holiday in honor of our Moses.

Moslems name their children Ibrahim for our Abraham; Yussuf for our Joseph; Musa for our Moses; Haroun for our Aaron; Daoud for our David; Suleiman for our Solomon. Moslems honor the major principles of the Jewish faith. Moslems esteem justice. Moslems judge men not by what they have but by what they are. Moslems teach fear of God and love of man.

These common qualities that pervade our two sister faiths cry out for closer bonds between Islam and Judaism. For many years, indeed for many centuries at a time, the destinies of Jew and Moslem were inextricably intertwined. The great Maimonides, who died 760 years ago, was court physician to a Moslem prince.

For centuries, Jewish scholarship and Moslem scholarship flourished side by side. Often when one community prospered, so did the other. And in our own day we see that when one is persecuted by godless nations, so is the other. We have shared and are sharing in adversity what we shared in good fortune.

As in individual families, there have unfortunately been periods of strife between the two sisters, but I am convinced that had there been close and determined efforts to nourish a sense of comradely understanding between us, many of the discordant stresses in the Middle East probably would have been averted.

Just as there is now better understanding with Christianity, so is it our duty to seek with all our hearts to create closer harmony with Islam. Eschewing political rivalries, let us as representatives of our religions seek to come together for the common purpose of enhancing the spiritual welfare of all the adherents of our two great faiths.

Let us not seek to dominate each other, to convert each other, to surpass each other; let us seek only to respect each other, to esteem each other, to love each other. With the true earnestness that becomes us as religious leaders, let us join together for harmony, respecting our theological differences but stressing our spiritual similarities and concentrating on our spiritual commonalities.

Let us take the first step toward each other as Moslem, as Jew, as child of God. I urge as such a first step, the creation of an international committee to study the best method of establishing communication between Judaism and Islam.

Such a committee would survey the history of Moslem-Jewish relations and report on the opportunities that can most favorably be found or made to seek a working religious relationship between Moslem and Jewish religious leaders. And I hope that this modest beginning will prove in time to be the historic first phase in a Moslem-Jewish concord that will help bring the lustre of peace to our troubled world and particularly to the Middle East.

In this era of peace under peril, religious leaders of all faiths are under a holy obligation to make every effort to resolve matters of moral moment in controversies among nations. Let us teach peace. Let us practice peace. Let us gain peace of mind through peace. And let us so live that the entire world will one day find its goal in the slogan of the World Council of Synagogues, "O, come let us walk in the light of the Lord."

ESHKOL TURNS DOWN BOURGUIBA PLAN, AWAITS PEACE

Gurion spokesman expressed "shock and astonishment" that Mr. Eshkol would have demanded that party members make public confessions of their opinions.

The spokesman said Mr. Ben-Gurion's minority faction would insist on convening a party conference to decide who will head the party, which is a major component of the coalition Government. A general election is scheduled for November.

Premier Eshkol was closely associated with Mr. Ben-Gurion for decades and was his chosen successor in 1963.

Friction between them grew last year, however, over Mr. Ben-Gurion's insistence that the Eshkol Government re-examine a dispute between former Defense Minister Pinhas Lavon and a former chief of military intelligence, Col. Benyamin Gibli, over which one of them had ordered a series of abortive "cloak and dagger" attacks against United States and British institutions in Egypt in 1954. The attacks, poorly executed, resulted in a loss of lives.

Mr. Eshkol was a member of a committee of ministers that investigated the matter in 1960 and recommended a Cabinet decision exonerating Mr. Lavon. Accordingly, he has resisted Mr. Ben-Gurion's demands for a new inquiry. Mr. Ben-Gurion has denounced the ministerial investigation as an infringement of judicial authority and a miscarriage of justice.

At the latest Mapai party conference, in February, about sixty per cent of the delegates supported Mr. Eshkol on the issue.

W.J.C. LEADER WARNS AGAINST ANY WEAKNESS IN WORLD JEWISH COMMUNITY

Weakness among Diaspora Jewry would jeopardize the support now being extended to Israel, a World Jewish Congress leader warned in an address to a gathering of Israeli notables in Jerusalem (May 11). Speaking at the opening ceremony of the Biblical and Archaeological Museum bearing his name, Samuel Bronfman, vice-president of the WJC, said that there were two Jewish worlds: the State of Israel, and the Diaspora (Dispersion).

"Israel and the Diaspora will always be with us," Mr. Bronfman declared, adding "we must vouchsafe a good life for the present and future generations. The Diaspora is as necessary to the well-being of Israel as Israel is to the spiritual and moral welfare of Jews elsewhere. These two simultaneous freedoms, as they have been called, must be carefully nurtured if a continuing Jewish life is to persist."

Commenting upon the advances made by Israel, Mr. Bronfman said that the opening of the Museum helped to forge "a very strong link in the chain of connection between world Jewry and Israel itself." Reflecting on what he called the position of two important Jewish worlds, Mr. Bronfman praised Israel for its tenacity and will to succeed. Israel would not be daunted by difficulties or threats to its sovereignty. Israel added lustre to the Jew, be he in Israel or the Diaspora.

The Jews of the Diaspora, constituting the second important Jewish world were, Mr. Bronfman said, certainly in the western countries, integral parts of their respective countries and at the same time represent strong Jewish communities interested in the perpetuation of their religion, culture, and way of life.

"Present day Diaspora Jewry comes on the scene of history with awesome responsibilities and obligations and must remain strong, living in peace and in friendship with their fellow citizens, taking part to the fullest extent in the life of their respective lands. They must continue to lend a helping hand to the people of Israel to integrate the newcomers so long as it is needed. If they are weak in the lands of the Diaspora, this support will be impossible.

"Our obligations as Diaspora Jews are vitally serious. We respond as citizens to all obligations of citizens but at the same time we consciously and with insistent deliberation maintain a strong and vibrant Jewish life."

The WJC leader said that the fact had to be recognized that the Jews of Israel are Israeli citizens; that Jews of the United States are American citizens of the Jewish faith; and likewise Canadian Jews are Canadians of the Jewish faith; and similarly in Britain, in France, and all other countries of Jewish community life.

These Jewish communities, Mr. Bronfman declared, had obligations of extending relief to Jews wherever they needed aid and of supporting Israel in its tasks of receiving the displaced and the homeless.

The Museum named for Mr. Bronfman was given to Israel by his children who, with other members of the Bronfman family, participated in the opening ceremonies in Jerusalem.

Dr. Bernard Cherrick, executive vice-president of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, will lecture on "The Significance Of The Dead Sea Scrolls" on May 31, at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. Tickets are available without charge from the Montreal Chapter of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, 1475 Metcalfe Street.

STUDY OF CHANGES IN DRAFT ON JEWS IS ENDED

Discussion of amendments to the Ecumenical Council's draft decree on religious liberty was quietly brought to an end, Vatican sources said. The draft, which contains the controversial declaration of the Roman Catholic Church's attitude toward Jews and other non-Christians, reports the New York Times, has been attacked within and outside the church since the Council convened in 1962.

The declaration was discussed during a meeting of the Secretariat for the Promotion of Christian Unity, which began on May 9. About 240 proposed amendments were considered but Vatican sources refused to say how many were approved.

The sources indicated, however, that the decree was amended, so it is possible that the text of the declaration on the Jews has been revised.

The draft decree will now be sent for study to participants in the fourth and presumably last session of the Council, opening next fall. Any amendment will have to be approved by a substantial majority vote of the Council.

While the declaration on the Jews, disavowing the ancient charge of collective Jewish responsibility for the Crucifixion of Jesus, was the center of discussions, the sources said the secretariat also formulated a number of "practical directives" on ecumenism or Christian unity, says the New York Times. The directives were said to have been requested by many Council Fathers.
